ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The image processing incorporates a regional difference such as an outline/edge area vs. a non-outline area in determining an appropriate correction coefficient. The image processing additionally includes any combination of an intensity level, a sharpness level and predetermined user input values. The input values include a user specified intensity level, a user specified document type, a user specified background removal level and other customized values.